

Book notices are given weekly to Kindergarten students to remind them to bring their library book the next day.

When a book is overdue, I will talk to the student about returning the book and keeping books in their backpack. Overdue notices will be distributed to students to take home when the student needs help finding the book, or is having difficulties returning their library book. There are no fees for overdue items; however, students will be denied checkout privileges if overdue items are not returned.

If an item is lost or damaged so that it may no longer be used, the student/ parent must pay the replacement cost of that item before they will be allowed to checkout more books. If lost books are found then the money for the item will be refunded.
